

2012 BoxScore Baseball Scouting Report

Introduction

This report, as created by RotoRank, serves three major functions:

1. PREPARATION FOR LEAGUE DRAFTS: This report serves as an invaluable tool for evaluating players' 2011 performances. It is particularly useful for BoxScore Baseball owners, as it utilizes our scoring categories, our league sizes, and our roster sizes.
2. PROVIDES POSITION DESIGNATIONS: Positions generally are based on what RotoRank has deemed to be most reasonable at the time of this posting. No matter where a given player may end up playing in 2012, he still may only be used at the position he is listed at in this report.
3. PROVIDES PLAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS: These player ID numbers are useful for drafting your team and for reporting transactions.

Scoring Categories

The six hitting categories we rank are batting average, home runs, runs batted in, runs scored, stolen bases, and OPS (On base average + Slugging pct.). The five pitching categories we rank are wins, wins minus losses, saves, earned run average, and strikeouts.

Pitchers

For your convenience, this Scouting Report has separated the pitchers who had three or more saves in 2011 from the pitchers who did not. However, when assembling your team, there will be no distinction given between starting pitchers and relief pitchers. You are to draft any combination of 10 pitchers (starters and relievers) that you desire.

Defining RotoValue and RotoRank

The following factors are used to determine each player's RotoValue: each player's accumulated statistics during the previous season, each player's assigned position, the scoring categories used, the number of teams in the league, the number of players to be drafted at each position, and the total number of players available to be drafted. The overall player average is used to determine how well each player performed against the norm. In general, a RotoValue of zero represents a player who has the same statistical output of the average major league player. Any player with a positive RotoValue outperformed the average player by this total percentage once all hitting/pitching categories were combined. Any player with a negative RotoValue under-performed the average player by this total percentage once all hitting/pitching categories were combined. The number in the RotoRank column takes the RotoValue and projects a draft order of all Major League Players from 1 to 1459 (the total number of players included in this report).
